

Mo and the Hairdresser

Mo's wife was an ugly woman. She had horrible eyes a big nose and fat lips. One day she decided that if she had a nice haircut it would make her more beautiful. So Mo took her to the hairdresser.

When the hairdresser had finished he held up a mirror so that Mo's wife could look at herself. She looked in the mirror and saw her ugly face. She saw her big nose and horrible eyes. She started to cry. Mo started crying as well. The hairdresser tried to calm them both down. He said he would give them a refund for the hair cut, but Mo would not stop crying.

Then Mo's wife became angry.

"Will you shut up?" she said. "I'm the one with an ugly face"

"I know," said Mo, "but I'm the one who has to look at it everyday."

downloaded at

English Language Space Station.com